Four-Power Pacific Treaty to Be Ratified by Senate Unless All Signs Fail.

MARGIN AT LEAST FIVE VOTES

Allied Reparations Commission Declines to Pay Bill for American Expenses on Rhine—Fighting in South Africa—India in Ferment.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

THE four-power Pacific treaty, it was asserted last week, would be ratified by the senate, unless all signs should fail. A margin of at least five votes was predicted. It follows that the other six pacts of the armament conference will be approved as a matter of course, if the treaty is ratified.

An agreement to vote was reached Wednesday. It was further agreed to take no more votes on amendments or reservations before the final vote, and to limit debate. It looked last week as if Senator Underwood, minority leader, would come across with at least eleven votes, instead of the eight he was expected to deliver.

Early in the assault on the treaty came the charges that the treaty had been framed by the British and Japanese; that secret negotiations had been concealed, and that the American delegates had been imposed upon. Secretary of State Hughes thereupon stated that he wrote the treaty, that there was no mystery about the treaty and that it was a good treaty. He was modest about it and he was plain-spoken. His statement was made in the form of a letter to Senator Underwood of Alabama, one of the four American delegates, who as minority senate leader is charged with the onerous job of delivering enough Democratic votes to assure the ratification of the treaty. Secretary Hughes said, among other things:

"The treaty itself is very short and simple, and is perfectly clear. It requires no commentary. Its engagements are easily understood, and no ingenuity in argument or hostile criticism can add to them or make them other or greater than its unequivocal language sets forth. There are no secret notes or understandings."

"In view of this, the question of authorship is unimportant. It was signed by four powers, whose delegates, respectively, adopted it, all having made various suggestions. I may say, however, with respect to the general course of negotiations that after assent had been given by Great Britain and Japan that France should be a party to the agreement, I prepared a draft of the treaty based upon the various suggestions which had been exchanged between the delegates. . . . I should add that, in order to avoid any misunderstanding I prepared a memorandum to accompany the treaty with respect to its effect in relation to the mandated islands and reserving domestic questions."

"At this stage, while it was not strictly a conference matter, in order to insure publicity at the earliest possible moment, the treaty, as thus agreed upon, and before it had been signed, was presented by Senator Lodge to the conference in plenary session and its form and limitations stated. His statement met with the acquiescence of all."

"There is not the slightest mystery about the treaty or basis for suspicion regarding it. It is a straightforward document which attains one of the most important objects the American government has had in view, and is of the highest importance to the maintenance of friendly relations in the Far East upon a sound basis. As the President recently said, in his communication to the senate, it is an essential part of the plan to create conditions in the Far East at once favorable to the maintenance of the policies we have long advocated and to an enduring peace. In view of this, and in view of the relation of the treaty to the results of the conference, its failure would be nothing short of a national calamity."

The senate debate over ratification confirms the wisdom of the President's choice of Senator Underwood as a conference delegate. There are those who consider the senator from Alabama one of the ablest men in public life. He certainly had a large opportunity for his skill as a debater when he attempted to round up his recalcitrant followers for ratification. The first day he stood for three hours before the Democrats he had led in so many partisan battles, arguing that they should forget party lines and join with the administration forces for ratification. It was almost exclusively a Democratic show, with the Republicans sitting on the sidelines and watching the astute minority leader fight it out with his unruly followers. The anti-trust Democrats were trying to trap him into an admission that the treaty in effect constituted an entangling alliance. But he insisted on "conference

U. S. HOODWINKED BY EUROPEANS

Lillian Russell to Urge All Immigration Be Stopped for Five Years.

REPORT TO SURPRISE DAVIS

Former Actress Says "Stories of Suffering and Oppression All Have Dollar Sign Back of Them."

New York, March 20.—Declaring that the American people were being hoodwinked by untrue stories of conditions in Europe, Lillian Russell, former stage beauty, who was sent abroad as a special commissioner of immigration, said that she would recommend in her report to Secretary of Labor James J. Davis that all immigration to this country be stopped for a period of five years.

Report Will Surprise Davis.

Miss Russell, who in private life is the wife of Alexander P. Moore, the Pittsburgh publisher, returned from the Aquitania and when she spoke of the immigration situation her eyes flashed.

"I have a detailed report that will amaze Secretary of Labor Davis," she said. "Our representatives at Washington have no real conception of the immigration situation that actually exists."

United States Hoodwinked.

"America is 'over-propagandered.' Stories of suffering humanity in Europe and oppression all have the dollar sign back of them. It is my own personal belief that there are organizations financed for the sole purpose of making money out of what they call humanity. Many well-meaning people are hoodwinked by these parasites who are trying to bring to this country men and women who do not understand our language.

Urge Stringent Tests.

"It seems to me a crime that American boys have to wait until they are twenty-one before they have a vote when such aliens as I saw abroad can within a period of five years have the privileges our forefathers fought for. Our slogan should be 'America for Americans'."

As a result of her investigations Miss Russell is convinced that there should be the most stringent tests before immigrants are permitted in this country.

HARD-COAL MEET DELAYED

First Session Halted Till Tuesday—Labor Seeking More Data, Says Lewis.

New York, March 20.—The arbitration committee of eight of anthracite coal miners and operators, charged with the task of negotiating a wage agreement in time to avert a suspension of the mines April 1, reduced the "margin of safety" to ten days by deciding to delay their first session until Tuesday. President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, a member of the committee, announced that the delay was due to their desire of labor men to consult their organizations and amass data concerning the wage controversy before opening the conference. It is generally agreed that the terms of a new contract cannot possibly be drawn and agreed upon within the ten days. Negotiations of previous agreements have required from a month to seven weeks, they point out, and it is probable that the suspension of mines, slated to take place at the expiration of the present contract, April 1, will continue for at least three weeks. Operators expressed belief that the new agreement would be drawn and effective before the consuming public began to feel a coal shortage, as the supplies on hand would be sufficient for a considerably longer period.

QUEBEC TO PROTECT LABOR

American Leaders Charged With Invading Canada and Sacrificing Interests of Workers.

Quebec, March 20.—A motion calling upon Canadian workers "to give themselves a constitution which will be essentially Canadian" was passed in the Quebec legislative assembly by a vote of 34 to 4. The motion was an amendment to a proposal by Brigadier General Smart that Canadian laborers in the province be compelled to incorporate. General Smart charged that American labor leaders were habitually invading Canada and that they frequently "sacrificed the interests of Canadian labor."

Rome, March 20.—Italy has sent a new and energetic note to Greece demanding release of the steamship Abbazia and complete satisfaction for the recent incidents.

TREASURY LOOTED OF $170,000

EMPLOYEE JAILED AS SUSPECT—TWO OTHER CLERKS TRIAL-ED TO VIRGINIA

LIBERTY BONDS STOLEN FROM VAULT—LOSS MAY AMOUNT TO $200,000—SECRET SERVICE MEN FOLLOW MISSING WORKERS.

Washington.—The largest robbery that has taken place at the United States Treasury Department in recent years was disclosed late Saturday night by Secret Service agents.

The Liberty bond branch of the department, located in the old Southern Railway Building, 119 D street, Northeast, was looted Saturday of approximately $170,000 worth of Liberty bonds.

Auditors, checking up books at the Registrar's office, intimated that the loss probably would reach $200,000.

Charles A. Cleverger, 25 years old, employed in the bond department of the Treasury, was locked up by Secret Service Agents in connection with the robbery.

Shortly after the robbery was noted agents of the Secret Service left for Richmond, Va., and Charlottesville, Va., where two employees of the office from which the bonds were stolen, are supposed to have gone.

The officers believe they are on the trail of the stolen bonds. At a late hour to-night no further arrests had been made.

A description of the men sought by the Secret Service was sent to police chiefs of all Southern cities.

Cleverger has been employed at the Treasury for the last two years.

Despite efforts of the Secret Service and the Department of Justice to keep the robbery from being known, it leaked out when Cleverger's father went to Police Headquarters tonight in answer to a letter he had received from his son informing him that he had been arrested in connection with the robbery.

The accused man's father said that his boy had served with the Nineteenth Engineers during the World War and was gassed twice. He has only been married a short time and has a seven-months-old son.

OBENCHAIN JURY DISAGREES

Discharged After Report of Hopeless Breach—Madalynne's Face Paired When Report Is Made

Los Angeles.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain, charged with the murder of J. Bleton Kennedy, reported to Judge Sidney N. Reeve, at 7:49 to-night that it was unable to reach an agreement and was discharged.

The jurors were divided hopelessly, according to their reports to Judge Reeve.

Each was asked separately whether there was a chance of agreement. Each replied there was "none."

The foreman stated to the Judge the division was nine to three, but, as the law requires, did not say whether the majority favored conviction or acquittal.

Most of the jurors, after they were discharged, were reluctant to talk with newspaper men.

$286,000,000 Richer

Washington.—Preliminary reports received by the Treasury on collections of March 15 installments of income and profits taxes showed a total of $286,000,000 on deposit in Federal reserve banks. On the basis of the amount received so far, officials declared, it was impossible to determine whether or not Secretary Andrew W. Mellon's estimate of $400,000,000 in tax receipts for the quarter would be obtained. Receipts from March payments last year aggregated $727,000.

A man by the name of Ethington is under $1,000 bond on a charge of shooting and wounding with intent to kill as a result of an affray on Kearney pike. Ethington's wife, Mrs. Mary Ethington, was in an automobile with Fouts when he was shot, police say.

Shin Bone Replaces Spine

Philadelphia.—An operation in which five inches of shin bone were cut from the leg of a four-year-old boy to replace five inches of his spine was performed in a hospital here. The patient, George Hawkinson, was brought here from his home at Concord, Mass., by his parents. He is paralyzed from the hips down.

The operation required an hour and twenty-minutes. The piece of backbone removed was diseased and is said to have caused the paralysis. It was not necessary to put a plate in the boy's leg, as physicians said that because of his age the shin bone will grow in such a manner as to replace the portion removed.

Loan Made To Road

Washington.—To aid the resumption of operations of the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad the Interstate Commerce Commission gave notice a Government loan of $3,500,000 would be extended, providing that the owners and the receiver of the property comply with certain conditions in its corporate re-organization.

Whisky thieves, who forced an entrance to the warehouse of the W. B. Samuels' distillery at Bardstown, Kentucky, on March 18th, were routed by a score of pistol shots fired by two guards who surprised them. No whisky was taken, but the thieves had six barrels of liquor ready to be moved when they were forced to flee. Arch Pendergrass, whom thieves met on their way to the distillery, was forced to accompany them. He narrowly escaped being shot by the guards. Pendergrass said the bandits numbered 10.

The escape was made despite the fact Jailer George W. Winter and his son, Forsee, had taken extra precautions and had stayed up all night, one in the office and the other outside.

SCORES W. J. BRYAN

Harry Emerson Fosdick, Professor in Union Theological Seminary, in an article in the New York Times, criticizes Mr. Bryan for his "sincere but appalling obscurantism." Here are some extracts from Professor Fosdick's article:

"When Mr. Bryan reduces evolution to a hypothesis and then identifies a hypothesis with a 'guess', he is guilty of a sophistry so shallow and palpable that one wonders at his hardihood in risking it." "Today the evolutionary hypothesis, after many years of pitiless attacks and searching investigation, is, as a whole, the most adequate explanation of the facts with regard to the origin of species that we have yet attained, and it was never so solidly grounded as today."

"When therefore, Mr. Bryan says, 'Neither Darwin nor his supporters have been able to find a fact in the universe to support their hypothesis', it would be difficult to imagine a statement more obviously and demonstrably mistaken. The real situation is that every fact on which investigation has been able to lay its hand helps to confirm the hypothesis of evolution. There is no known fact which stands out against it."

"He (Mr. Bryan) says, 'Is it not strange that a Christian will accept Darwinism as a substitute for the Bible when the Bible not only does not support Darwinism but directly and expressly contradicts it?' What other interpretation of such a statement is possible except this?—that the Bible is for Mr. Bryan an authoritative textbook in biology—and, if in biology, why not in astronomy, cosmogony, chemistry or any other science, art or concern of man whatever? One who is acquainted with the history of theological thought gasps as he reads this."

"Martin Luther attacked Copernicus with the same appeal which Mr. Bryan uses. He appealed to the Bible. He said, 'This fool wishes to reverse the entire science of astronomy, but sacred scripture tells us that Joshua commanded the sun to stand still and not the earth.' "Father Inchover felt so confident that he cried, 'The opinion of the earth's motion is of all heresies the most abominable, the most pernicious, the most scandalous; the immovability of the earth is thrice sacred, argument against the immortality of the soul, the existence of God, and the incarnation should be tolerated sooner than an argument to prove the earth moves.'"

The Dignity of Man

"The fundamental interest which leads Mr. Bryan and others of his school to hate evolution is the fear that it will deprecate the dignity of man. Just what do they mean? Even in the Book of Genesis God made man out of the dust of earth. Surely, that is low enough to start and evolution starts no lower. So long as God is the Creative Power, what difference does it make whether out of the dust by sudden fiat or out of the dust by gradual process God brought man into being? Here man is and what he is he is. Were it decided that God had dropped him from the sky, he still would be the man he is. If it is decided that God brought him up by slow gradations out of lower forms of life, he still is the man he is.

"The fact is that the process by which man came to be upon the planet is a very important scientific problem, but, it is not a crucially important religious problem. Origins prove nothing in the realm of values. To all of spiritual insight man, no matter by what process he at first arrived, is the child of God, made in His image, destined for His character. If one could appeal directly to Mr. Bryan he would wish to say: let the scientists thrash out the problems of man's biological origin but in the meantime do not teach men that if God did not make us by fiat then we have nothing but a bestial heritage. That is a lie which, once believed, will have a terrific harvest. It is regrettable business that a prominent Christian should be teaching that."

The Real Enemies of Christian Faith

"Indeed, the real enemies of the Christian faith, so far as our students are concerned, are not the evolutionary biologists, but folk like Mr. Bryan who insist on setting up artificial adhesions between Christianity and outgrown scientific opinions, and who proclaim that we cannot have one without the other. The pity is that so many students will believe him and, finding it impossible to retain the outgrown scientific opinions, will give up Christianity in accordance with Mr. Bryan's insistence that they must."

Man's Thought of God

"But the effect of evolution upon man's thought of God, as every serious student of theology knows, has been directly the opposite of what Mr. Bryan supposes. It was in the eighteenth century that men thought of God as the vague, dim figure over the crest of the first hill who gave this universal toboggan its primeval shove and has been watching it sliding ever since. It was in the eighteenth century that God was thought of as the absentee landlord who had built the house and left it—as the shipwright who had built the ship and then turned it over to the master mariners, his natural laws. Such ideas of God are associated with eighteenth century Deism, but the nineteenth century's most characteristic thought of God was in terms of immanence—God here in this world, the life of all that lives, the sustaining energy of all that exists, as our spirits are in our bodies, permeating vitalizing, directing all."

"The ideal of evolution was one of the great factors in this most profitable change."

Mr. Huxley's reply to Bishop Wilberforce, when the latter asked him whether he was related by his grandfather's or his grandmother's side to the ape, might well be addressed to Mr. Bryan: "I asserted, and I repeat, that a man has no reason to be ashamed of having an ape for his grandfather. If there were an ancestor whom I should feel shame in recalling, it would be a man, a man of restless and versatile intellect who, not content with equivoical success in his own sphere of

THE PARABLE OF THE MERCHANT AND THE HUSBAND-MAN

Now there was a certain husbandman who dwelt among the hills, and he had many flocks and herds. And he ruled over broad fields and great forests. And in his country he was a man of righteousness, for he gave liberally to the poor and his house was open always. And he abode in uprightness and flourished greatly.

It came to pass that the husbandman found himself in need of certain articles, and he gathered up great store, even a wagon load of the produce of his flocks and herds, and of the fruits of his fields, and he went into a city to sell and to buy, for those who dwelt in the city had need of his goods and he had need of theirs. And he came to the house of a merchant and offered to sell his produce and buy the merchant's goods.

This parable sheweth that greed over-reacheth itself.

nails, flint rocks, broken glass, lie soap and brimstone. And he blessed it and returned to that town.

And he made a great slaughter of the merchants and slew above four thousand of them, and spoiled their goods. And the name of that town is forgotten.

Now when the husbandman was returned from the slaughter, his neighbors set him in a high place and elected him school trustee, and they abode in good fellowship all the days of their lives and went no more to the local merchants, but kept for themselves and their children the fat of the land. And when one lacked shoes or clothing, he sent unto the mail order houses, and it was well with his purse.

This parable sheweth that greed over-reacheth itself.

agreement." "Some of them checked" their leader. Only the unfailing good nature of the Alabamian stayed off a stormy session. It was a situation that only an experienced and able man could meet.

Next came an assault on the treaty by Senator Borah of Idaho and Senator Johnson of California, Republicans irreconcilables. They questioned the authorship of the treaty, despite the letter from Secretary Hughes. Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, majority leader, made them admit they had not meant to reflect on the veracity of Secretary Hughes. In effect the two senators assailed the treaty as a "quadruped alliance." Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin answered them.

The pro-treaty forces scored a victory Tuesday when they voted down an amendment by Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas designed to wreck the treaty. The Robinson amendment would have had the effect of converting the four-power pact into a league of nations. It pledged all the signatories to respect each other's territorial integrity and to commit no act of aggression against any nation that should leave the pact. Furthermore, it provided, in case of disputes, that outside nations interested should be invited to participate in the four-power pact.

The vote was 55 to 39. Eleven members were absent. Six were paired. The five unpaired absents are all accounted for ratification. Four Republicans, committed against ratification, voted for the amendment: Borah of Idaho, Johnson of California, La Follette of Wisconsin and Prince of Maryland. Four Democrats voted against it: Underwood of Alabama, Pomerene of Ohio, Ransdell of Louisiana and Williams of Mississippi. Later similar amendments by Senators Walsh of Montana and Pittman of Nevada, both Democrats, were voted down by substantially the same vote. Then a series of amendments and reservations was dumped into the hamper to be ready for presentation before the final roll call.

LIFE to Uncle Sam just now must seem just one treaty after another. Anyway, he presented last week to the allied reparations commission in Paris a bill for $241,000,000 for the expenses of the American army of occupation on the Rhine up to May 1, 1921. The allied commissioners registered frozen horror, but thawed sufficiently to stick the bill on a spindle. You see, they were engaged in dividing up among themselves a reparations payment of 1,000,000,000 gold marks by Germany and naturally regarded the presentation of the American claim—which to date is something like $200,000,000—as very bad form. They therefore washed their hands of the matter and referred it to the allied government.

The French press sets forth what is presumably the allied view: The United States declined to ratify the treaty of Versailles, hence it has no legal claim to payment under its terms. The United States made its own separate treaty with Germany; therefore it should do its own collecting from Germany. The British press—some of it—thinks that, while Uncle Sam has no legal claim, he may have a moral claim, but why didn't he speak up sooner? All of which lends emphasis to the saying of the Man on the Street: "We have all the real money in the world and for that very reason not a single real friend." Evidently the new funding commission to see what can be done about the eleven billions of allied debts is in for an adventure.

DID YOU remember London Punch's famous cartoon depicting a faintly council of the British Lion's restless brood during the World War?

Well, the Union of South Africa is sure restless. Last week saw the climax and suppression of the strike of miners which has held South Africa in its grip for more than two months. It had all the hallmarks of an attempt at revolution. The strikers captured half a dozen towns and nearly got possession of Johannesburg. Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, the premier, proclaimed martial law, called out all the government troops and took command in person. Censored reports show the killing of more than 1,000 strikers, police and soldiers. Grenades, bombs, machine guns, airplanes and tanks figured in the fighting; cities were bombed; thousands of strikers were captured. It was real war for a week. The South African Industrial Federation then declared the strike off and denied complicity in the rebellion. This man Smuts is a strong man. He has risen from a Dutch general in the Boer war to one of the leading statesmen of the British Commonwealth of Nations, as he calls it. Many believe Smuts to be the logical successor to Lloyd George.

IT LOOKS as if All Fools' Day would be celebrated by a strike of the coal miners. Secretary of Labor Davis did not succeed last week in getting the operators and men for conference on a new wage agreement. Neither side appears to care particularly whether or not the strike comes. The only consolation for the public lies in the probability that some of the mining districts will keep at work.

Mary Garden, Chicago's arbiter of grand opera, says that some of the high-priced stars must fill the house or take less pay or get out.

Uncle Sam is reported to be considering the negotiation of treaties with Great Britain and Cuba to put an end to liquor smuggling into the United States.

Radio experts are predicting that the presidential campaign of the future will be conducted by wireless telephone. What's that story about the mayor who was elected because he broke his leg and the voters never saw him?

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—With his grandfather, small business man, in watching the Decoration Day Parade in the little town, the old gentleman, a veteran of the Civil war, endeavors to impress the youngster with the significance of the great conflict, and many years afterward the boy was to remember his words with startling vividness.

CHAPTER II.—In the schoolroom, a few years afterward, Ramsey was not distinguished for remarkable ability, though his two pronounced dislikes were well known. "Recitation," in sharp contrast to Ramsey's bawdiness, is the specialty of little Dora Yocom, a young lady whom in his bawdiness he dominates. "Teacher's Pet."

CHAPTER III.—In high school, where as Dora are classmates, Ramsey continues to feel that the girl delights to manifest her superiority, and the vindictiveness he generates becomes alarming, culminating in the resolution that some day he would "show" her.

CHAPTER IV.—At a class picnic Ramsey, to his intense surprise, appears to attract the favorable attention of Miss Milla Rust, a young lady of about his own age and the acknowledged belle of the class. Milla has the misfortune to fall into a trap, with tantalizing to Ramsey, and that youth promptly pounces to the rescue. The water is only some three feet deep, but Milla's gratitude for his heroic act is embarrassing. He is in fact taken captive by the fair one, to his great consternation.

CHAPTER V.—The acquaintance ripens, Ramsey's Milla opinion, and the company with the former's parents wonder. His mother indeed goes so far as to express some disapproval of his choice, even hinting that Dora Yocom would be a more suitable companion, a suggestion which the youth receives with horror.

CHAPTER VI.—At this period our hero gets the thrill of his "first kiss," Milla being very willing to give it. In her flippancy over the matter disconcerts Ramsey immensely, but shortly afterward the girl departs for a visit to Chicago. She leaves an endearing missive for Ramsey, which adds to his feeling of melancholy.

CHAPTER VII.—Shortly after Milla's departure, her friend, Sadie Clews, informs Ramsey that his inamorata has been married to her cousin and is not coming back. The little romance is ended. Within a few months Ramsey and his closest friend, Fred Mitchell, go to the state university. Ramsey's chief feeling being one of relief that he has got away from the detested Dora. To his horror he finds she is also a student at the university, and that she is a member of the society. Ramsey is chosen as Dora's opponent in a debate dealing with the matter of Germany's right to invade Belgium. Dora being assigned the negative side of the argument. Partly on account of his friend toward Dora, and natural necessities, he makes a miserable showing and Dora carries off the honors. A brash youngster named Linski objects to the showing made by Ramsey and becomes personal in his remarks. The matter ends with Ramsey, in the university vernacular, giving Linski a "peach of a punch on the snout."

He had begun to shriek; moisture fell from his brow and his mouth; the scandalized society was on its feet, moving nervously into groups. Evidently the meeting was about to disintegrate. "I'll have my say!" the frenzied Linski screamed. "You try to put up this capitals' trick and work a fake to carry over this debate agains' Chotzusky, but you can't work it on me, lemme tell you! I'll have my say!"

"I'll Have My Say! the Frenzied Linski Screamed."

The outraged chairman was wholly at a loss how to deal with the unprecedented situation—so he defined it, quite truthfully; and he continued to pound upon the desk, while other clamors began to rival Linski's; shouts of "Put him out!" "Order!" "Shut up, Freshman!" "Turn him over to the sophomores!"

"This meeting is adjourned!" belied the chairman, and there was a thronging toward the doors while the frothing Linski asseverated: "I'm a-gonna git my say, I tell you! I'll have my say! I'll have my say!"

He had more than that, before the hour was over. A moment after he emerged from the building and came out, still hot, upon the cool, dark campus, he found himself the center of a group of his own classmates whom he at first mistook for sophomores, such was their manner.

"What?"
This exclamation was a simultaneous one; the astounded pair stared at him in blank incredulity.

"Why, don't you think so?" Colburn mildly inquired. "She seems to me very unusual looking."

"Well, yes," Fred assented, emphatically. "We're with you there!"

"Extraordinary eyes," continued Colburn. "Lovely figure, too; altogether a strikingly pretty girl. Handsome, I should say, perhaps. Yes, 'handsome' rather than 'pretty.' He looked up from a brief reverie. "You fellows know her long?"

"You bet!" said Ramsey.

"She made a splendid impression on the Lumen," Colburn went on. "I don't remember that I ever saw a first appearance there that quite equaled it. She'll probably have a brilliant career in the society, and in the university, too. She must be a very fine sort of a person." He deliberated within himself a few moments longer, then, realizing that his hosts and brethren did not respond with any heartiness—or with anything at all—to the theme he changed it, and asked them what they thought about the war in Europe.

They talked of the war drowsily for a while; it was an interesting but not an exciting topic: the thing they spoke of was so far away. After a few moments of fervor, the conversation languished, and Brother Colburn rose to go.

"Well, I'm glad you gave that Linski a fine little punch, Brother Milholland," he said at the door. "It won't do you any harm in the 'frat' or with the Lumen, either. And don't be discouraged about your debating. You'll learn. Anybody might have got rattled by having to argue against as clever and good-looking a girl as that!"

The roommates gave each other a look of serious puzzlement as the door closed. "Well, Brother Colburn is a mighty nice fellow," Fred said. "He's kind of funny, though."

Ramsey assented, and then, as the two prepared for bed, they entered into a further discussion of their senior friend. They liked him "all right," they said, but he certainly must be kind of queer, and they couldn't just see how he had "ever managed to get where he was" in the "frat" and the Lumen and the university.

Ramsey passed the slightly distinguished Linski on the campus next day without betraying any embarrassment or making a sign of recognition. Fred Mitchell told his roommate, chuckling, that Linski had sworn to "get" him, and, not knowing Fred's affiliations, had made him the confidant of his oath. Fred had given his blessing, he said, upon the enterprise, and advised Linski to use a trick. "He'll hit you on the head with it," said the light-hearted Fred, failing back upon this old joke. "Then you can catch it as it bounces off and throw it back at him."

Ramsey proved to be merely an episode, not only so far as Ramsey responded from the deep chair, where he had moodily thrown himself, and, returning to his brooding upon his oratory, "Oh, murder!" he moaned.

"Well," said the senior, "you'll know him when you see him again. Put your mark on him where you can see it, all right!" he chuckled.

"I suppose I really ought to have interfered in that, but I decided to do a little astronomical observation, about fifty feet away, for a few minutes. I'm way behind in my astronomy, anyhow. Do you know this Linski, Brother Mitchell?"

"I've talked to him a couple of times on the campus," said Fred. "He's in one of my classes. He's about the oldest in our class. I guess—a lot older than us, anyhow. He's kind of an anarchist or something; can't talk more'n five minutes any time without gettin' off some bug stuff about 'capitalism.' He said the course in political economy was all 'capitalism' and the prof was bought by Wall Street."

"Poor old Prof. Craig!" Colburn laughed. "He gets fifteen hundred a year."

"Yes; I'd heard that myself, and I told Linski, and he said he had an uncle workin' in a steel mill got twice that much, but it didn't make any difference, ole Craig was bought by Wall Street. He said 'capitalism' better look out; he and the foreign-born workmen were goin' to take this country some day, and that was one of the reasons he was after an education. He talked pretty strong pro-German, too—about the war in Europe—but I sort of thought that was more because he'd be pro-anything that he thought would help upset the United States than because he cared much about Germany."

"Yes," said Colburn, "that's how I sounded tonight. I guess there's plenty more like him in the cities, too. That reminds me: I'd better arrange a debate on immigration for the Lumen. We'll put Brother Milholland for the negative, this time."

Ramsey started violently. "See here!"

But the senior reassured him. "Just wanted to see you jump," he explained. "Don't fear; you've done your share."

"I should think I have!" Ramsey groaned.

"Yes; you won't be called on again this term. By the way," said Colburn, thoughtfully, "that was a clever girl you had against you tonight. I don't believe in pacifism much, myself, but she used it very niftily for her argument. Isn't she from your town, this Miss Yocom?"

Fred nodded. "Well, she's a clever young thing," said the senior, still thoughtful. And he added: "Graceful girl, she is."

At this, the roommates looked at him with startled attention. Ramsey was so roused as to forget his troubles and sit forward in his chair.

"Yes," said the musing Colburn, "she's a mighty pretty girl."

Which?

There are some people who go thru life with a smooth serenity that is seldom ruffled. It is not ruffled because they do not trouble to go deeply into affairs and conditions around them. They do no harm in the world, and sometimes exert themselves to the extent of doing a little good. We like them, but they command no great amount of admiration.

There is another class, and they are in the majority, who are not averse to speaking their minds. Generally they are fair students of men and conditions, dig down after facts, make up their minds after careful analysis, and then stand by their convictions. They give praise where it is due, but do not hesitate to censure when it becomes necessary. They are the constructive citizens of this country.

And then there is still a third class. They are the kickers—the chronic ones—and their happiest moments are when they are kicking at something, or somebody, or both. They come into the world kicking, go thru life with a kick, and kick like the devil because they have to shuffle off. They are destructive to society, but more destructive to themselves.

The choice is yours.

How They Do It

Some people possess the faculty of "getting next" to almost every good proposition that comes along. This is especially true with regard to anything of exceptional value that is offered by our local merchants. It saves them many dollars in the run of a year.

They read the ads in every issue of the home paper, never omitting even the small want ads.

Every issue of this paper has something of especial value advertised therein, something that many people would be glad to have.

The persistent ad. reader locates these things—and gets them. Keep your bargain eye on the ads. of the home merchant. If he says it is good, or of especial value, you may be sure it is as he states. He cannot afford to misrepresent his goods, even if he so desired. To do so would soon put him out of business.

This paper is always full of good things you need and want. You'll read about them in the ads.

Read up, and pick 'em up.

For A Better Berea

Berea has a wide reputation for its beauty and its brotherliness. Few people who live here now care to go anywhere else, and many people who reside in other towns would like to come to Berea.

This town does not possess the wealth of some so-called more favored towns, but it possesses character and faith, and these things cannot be bought or sold. They may be acquired or thrown away. Berea has good government, and its morals are above the average, but in spite of all the good that may be said in our favor, there are some defects still, some unfinished tasks, some room for improvement.

If a man were to wash only one side of his face and continually neglect the other side, he would soon become a local curiosity—he would be the talk of the town and his sanity would be questionable. Many people who would pity such a man apply the same principle when it comes to cleaning up their surroundings. There are those in the world who take particular pains to see that the front yard is neat and clean, but pay no attention to the Augean-like accumulation of filth along the back fence. Unclean side streets and back yards are a menace to health and are a detriment to property interests. Unwholesome sights that exist along a railroad track coming into a town give a very bad impression to the hundreds of people who pass thru daily.

There should be a general cleaning up in Berea. The spring is almost here, with the song of bird and the burst of bud. Let us receive her into a swept house.

If you believe in Berea, you will like it, and if you like it, no effort toward its improvement will be too great for you.

Our faith in this town, brother, is simply faith in you. We need united action.

PARODY ON TOM ALEC JOHNSON

BIG BUSINESS BUNGLES

Big Business makes a mistake in opposing the soldier bonus so strenuously. It is not wise, and it is not patriotic.

If it were not for the work our soldiers did in France, Big Business would not be as big as it is today. It would be paying enormous tribute in one way or another to a foreign country. It would not be dominant, and arrogant, as it is now, but would be begging and cringing for mercy and favors. A victorious Germany would not have proven a merciful taskmaster.

Big Business forgets. It needs to have its memory jogged.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Many Bereans attended the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Blanton, of West Union, Tuesday of this week. All of their eight children were present with the exception of Chester, who is in the marines.

After a bountiful dinner the children presented each with a nice gold ring. That of Mrs. Blanton's was a plain band ring, and Mr. Blanton's had the Masonic emblem engraved on it. The presents from friends followed, and after music, hymns, and a genial good time, all present went away feeling that the day had been full of joy and gladness.

Success.

Typist—There's some one knocking. Why don't you answer? Office Boy—if it's the boss I'll get that raise. He told me this morning that every knock was a boost.—Wayside Tales.

MRS. NETTIE LEWIS COLE

Our community was shocked and saddened on March, the 15th, at 2:00 o'clock, when the death angel entered and carried away the spirit of Mrs. Nettie Lewis Cole. She prepared breakfast that morning, but was not feeling well, and went to bed. Dr. B. F. Robinson was called, but she passed away just as he reached her home. Apoplexy of the brain was the cause. So it pays to be ready when the Master calls. She was born January 27, 1870, died March 15, 1922. She gave her heart to God at the age of 17 and united with Pilot Knob Baptist church and continued a faithful member. She often spoke of her faith and of God's grace, that she was ready to go at anytime, that she had a home in heaven prepared for her, not made with hands. She was of that kind disposition, always ready to help in time of need. She had many friends and neighbors. She leaves her husband, William Cole, five children: Claud Lewis, of Waynesville, Ohio; Mrs. Pearl Lovett, Maud Nathan, and Gladys Lewis (these three lived with their mother), eight grandchildren: two brothers, G. W. Moody, W. F. Moody; four sisters, Mrs. R. L. Brown, Mrs. John Lawson, of this county; Mrs. J. F. Lawson of Fayette county; Mrs. Sterlin McGuire of Harlem, Mont., and many friends and relatives to mourn her loss. The funeral was conducted by Rev. J. W. Parker at the grave in the Berea cemetery, his subject being "Prepare to Meet Thy God." We extend sympathy to the family.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks for the kindness of the neighbors and friends of Mrs. Nettie Lewis Cole. Especially do we thank Bro. J. W. Parker for his consoling talk, and Mr. Smith and Rominger, the undertakers, and relatives for the flowers.

MRS. ARMSTRONG PASSES AWAY

Mrs. June Armstrong died quite suddenly Tuesday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joe Gilbert on Pearl street. Mrs. Armstrong has been an invalid for several years, and was watched over by her husband, daughters, and grand-daughters all these years.

Her remains were laid to rest in the Richmond Cemetery where her relatives sleep. The bereaved family have the deepest sympathy of the whole community.

UNION CHURCH

Prof. N. C. Hirsch will preach at the regular Sunday morning service at the Union church. The prayer meeting will be led by Prof. H. H. Groves.

Beginning with the first Sunday in April, evening services will be held in the Union church. The matter of an evening service has been under consideration sometime, as the membership of the church cannot be accommodated in the evening College Chapel as formerly. These services begin now in order that they may be well under way by the time the new church is ready with its larger opportunities. Every care will be taken to make the meetings interesting and fitted to the needs of the people, and it is hoped that they may meet with a ready response.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

Last week's meeting of the Woman's Club proved both unique and interesting, altho the attendance was not quite so large on account of the influenza epidemic.

Some matters of local interest occupied a large part of the business session. The cooperation of the Club women with College Workers and Red Cross in promoting community work now being carried out in the rural districts around Berea deserves mention.

Literature concerning the Firestone Scholarship to the University of Kentucky, offered by Harvey S. Firestone to the person sending in the best essay on "Good Roads," was placed by the President in the hands of some member of the Club. This scholarship was won last year by a West Virginia girl, thirteen years of age. Berea should have several competitors for the scholarship.

The unique feature of the meeting was an exchange of their best recipes for preparing delicious things to eat by the members present. Perhaps some gentlemen could testify to the happy results of the proceeding should they be consulted.

In conclusion Miss Logan spoke for about fifteen minutes on the pressing need of a County Demonstrator for Madison county.

His Way.

"No matter how you feel," said the jolly person, "you should always try to seem cheerful."

"I do," replied the morose one. "I always laugh when I go to a comic opera."—Wayside Tales.

THE FARM GARDEN

Health, convenience, economy, and often domestic peace, demand that every farmer have a truck garden, but in too many cases it is either left to the women folks to make, or is neglected entirely. The men feel that their time is required for larger things. This mistaken notion is due to the fact that many farmers do not understand how to lay out a garden to produce the best results with the least labor, and also because they fail to realize the many advantages of having fresh vegetables handy to the kitchen door.

All doctors agree that spring vegetables come just when we need them most. The blood is heavy and clogged with impurities from the winter diet. With the coming of warm spring days, we need not only a change in diet, but the blood needs a thorough cleansing as well. Fresh spring vegetables serve both purposes admirably.

Like everything else, the farm garden must be managed with judgment in order to get the most out of it with the least outlay of time and labor. There must be judgment exercised in selecting the plot, in laying it out, in planting, and in cultivating.

If possible, the garden should be near the house. The reason for this is obvious, but of course the important thing is to select soil that is rich and fertile and easy to work. Hence, a good plot, even tho it be some distance out in the fields, will prove more satisfactory than a poor plot near the house. If in the fields, the garden can often be arranged at the end of a cornfield so that potatoes, sweet corn, and other hardy vegetables can be cultivated when the corn is plowed. Wherever the garden is, it needs plenty of well-rotted manure.

A garden arranged in beds looks nice, but for the farmer the long rows are better because they require less labor. It saves a lot of time and trouble to use a marker to lay out the rows. A marker is quickly made. Cut a piece of light board three or four feet long. To this nail uprights, six inches long, set the width of the rows. Fasten the whole thing to the rake. With this the rows can be made straight and the same distance apart.

A chicken-tight fence is really a necessity. It may be a little extra labor and expense at first, but once built will require no more attention for year, and will save much trouble. We used to build ours with the two end fences in sections, lightly nailed to the posts. Then in plowing we took the fences down and turned around in the adjoining field instead of in the garden. This saved spading the ends, and in cultivating it saved tramping down the growing plants.

And when it comes cultivating time if your garden cannot be worked properly with the corn cultivator and a little hoeing, then for the sake of the garden and your own temper, get a wheel hoe. With the old-fashioned, long-handled hoe, you'll break your back, and possibly one or two of the commandments, trying to keep the weeds down and the soil loose. With the wheel hoe, the whole garden can be worked in a short time with little labor. But the best thing about the hoe is this: The women folks think it is a lot of fun to run it. Get the point?

And by all means get the garden habit. It will keep your blood pure, your joints limber, and your spirit young. And it will make your wife think you are not such a bad fellow after all.

The SANDMAN STORY

JACK'S HIND FOOT

YOUNG JACK RABBIT had been told by his mother not to venture out. "There is going to be a storm," said Mrs. Rabbit, "and the snow will be deep and the wind anything but gentle, so snuggle down in your bed and go to sleep."

But Jack Rabbit was hungry, very hungry, indeed, for he had seen some turnips being carried into Mr. Man's barn, and though he did not dare go in then, he did look about and find a nice convenient hole where he could eat for once in his life.

Mr. Dog would be sound asleep, and he would not be nosing about looking for poor little hungry rabbits at that hour, and Mr. Horse never bothered anyone, and now his mother was spoiling him.

He took long leaps and jumps and soon Jack was crossing the field, running toward the barn.

"Oh, dear," cried Jack as he stopped in the snow a minute, for there was snow on the ground that had been there a long time, but the thing that made him cry out was a heavy gust of wind that blew his long ears about and struck Jack right in his eyes.

The moon was nowhere to be seen and as Jack Rabbit hopped along he saw that snow was coming down very fast. It was no use turning back now, so he kept right on hopping toward the barn.

He was pretty cold and tired when he got to the convenient hole in the side of the barn, and when he was in where it was nice and warm once more, Jack waited a minute before running over to the turnips which he had seen on the door in one corner of the barn.

"There is Mrs. Hen and her chicks," thought Jack. "She was sensible to come in here instead of staying in the poultry house this cold night, and then she is safer here from Mr. Fox than with the other poultry."

Jack's ears went up straight for he heard a sound outside, although it was faint. "What's that?" he thought, sitting very still and his whiskers trembling as he listened.

"I guess I better run right home," said Jack Rabbit, hurrying toward the convenient hole through which he had entered, but when he reached it he changed his mind quickly, for Mr. Fox's nose was poked through and Jack Rabbit turned to run.

Then he remembered his hind foot and when he was aware Mr. Fox was about he fled the hole through which he had entered, but when he reached it he changed his mind quickly, for Mr. Fox's nose was poked through and Jack Rabbit turned to run.

But Mrs. Hen was wide awake, for she was aware Mr. Fox was about before Jack had seen him, and now she was chucking her thanks at Jack as he sat trembling behind a barrel.

Jack Rabbit was a hero and did not know it. For Mrs. Hen told him he had saved her and her children also from that bad Mr. Fox.

By and by when it was all quiet again in the barn Jack crept to the turnips and ate his fill and then he ran off home again, for it had stopped snowing and the moon was out.

ing it all by saying it was going to snow and the wind would blow. It was too bad; that was all there was about it.

Jack Rabbit thought all this and more, too, and the first thing he knew, instead of being sleepy he was wide awake and hungrier than ever.

He got out of his nice warm bed and peeked out of the door. It wasn't snowing and even if the wind was blowing there was the moon. "Mother does not know everything, and this she surely is mistaken," thought Jack.

He did not notice the clouds scudding across the face of the moon, for ing it all by saying it was going to snow and the wind would blow. It was too bad; that was all there was about it.

Jack Rabbit thought all this and more, too, and the first thing he knew, instead of being sleepy he was wide awake and hungrier than ever.

He got out of his nice warm bed and peeked out of the door. It wasn't snowing and even if the wind was blowing there was the moon. "Mother does not know everything, and this she surely is mistaken," thought Jack.

LESSON FOR APRIL 2

ASA RELIES ON GOD

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 14:1-12. GOLDEN TEXT—Help us, O Lord our God, for we rest on Thee.—II Chron. 14:12. REFERENCE MATERIAL—II Chron. 14:13-16; Isa. 41:10-13. PRIMARILY TOPIC—A King Who Trusted God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God Helping Asa. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Ruler Who Relied on God.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Source of Personal and National Power.

I. Asa's Reformation (vv. 1-5).

Asa was the grandson of Rehoboam, Both his grandfather and father favored idolatry, but in spite of this record of his ancestors, Asa had a will of his own, and, though young when he came to the throne, inaugurated a campaign of reform which brought great good. He not only had the handicap of the idolatry and immorality fostered by the two former kings, but he had to contend against the influence of his mother who had encouraged immoral worship (I Kings 15:13). In order to carry out his reformatory measures he had to wrest authority from her by deposing her. Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord (v. 2).

1. Cleared the land of idolatrous emblems and images (vv. 3, 5). (1) Strange altars. These were the altars devoted to other gods. (2) High places. These were places where unlawful sacrifices were offered. (3) Broke down the images. These were upright stones connected with idolatrous worship. (4) Cut down the groves. These were trees or poles connected with tree worship. He had all these relics of idolatry destroyed in Jerusalem and other cities throughout his kingdom.

2. Commanded Judah to seek the Lord (v. 4). He knew that if the reformation was to be effective it must be by the positive seeking after and worshipping of God, accompanied by obedience to His commandments. Destructive work avails little unless followed by constructive.

II. Asa's Defensive Preparations (vv. 6-8).

1. Built fortified cities (v. 6). The cities are not named, but the meaning, doubtless, is that it was a general system of defense which involved the cities at strategic points.

2. He erected walls about the cities (v. 7). These were usually of stone. Upon the walls were observation towers from which the position and movements of the enemy could be seen, and from which defensive warfare could be waged.

3. Made gates and barred them (v. 7). The reason he assigns for these defensive preparations was that they had sought the Lord God. Those who really trust God will make every effort to provide defense.

4. Had an army of spearmen (v. 8). These spearmen were also protected with large shields. The army was made up of 480,000 brave men. They were prepared to wage an offensive as well as a defensive war.

III. Asa's Victory Over Zerah, the Ethiopian (vv. 9-12).

1. Asa set the battle in array (v. 10). He went out to meet the enemy. He first made a disposition of his means of defense. This was wisdom on his part. Intelligent faith moves the possessor to do first that which is within his power.

2. Asa's prayer (vv. 11, 12). He cried unto the Lord. He sought the source of national power. In this prayer note (1) his conscious helplessness. As he faced the Egyptian army two to one against him, he was clearly conscious of his impotency. The first requisite in obtaining help from God is conscious weakness. The Christian conquers not by self-reliance, but by self-distrust and faith in God. (2) Appeals to God for help. He knew that though they were helpless before the mighty enemy, with God's help they could win the victory. One man with God is a majority. (3) Reposes faith in God. The word "rest" means to lean upon—to cast the entire weight upon. In the measure that we realize our need of support will we lean hard upon God. (4) Advanced courageously. He went forth depending upon God to fight for him. Real faith does not wait until it sees its way clear, but goes forth expecting God to clear the way. (5) Hung himself upon God's arms. "O Lord, thou art our God." His cause was God's cause. If God has taken us for His people, and if we have taken Him for our God, no enemy can prevail against us. May we experimentally say, "Thou art my God," and hear Him say, "I am thy God."

3. The Egyptians smitten (v. 12). The enemy fled before Israel and could not recover themselves.

Education and the New World

The old world must and will come to an end, but it is to come in the building of a new world and not by a sudden cataclysm. There will be simply a revision or a succession of revisions until the old has become new.

Education is the process of conquering one's environment. The widening of that circle should end only with life. Every day should the world be made new by some new acquisition of truth.
